There is a big competition between computer engineers. You need to make a difference in the sector to be successful.

Which parts of the presentation were particularly important/useful?

The part he talked about being a computer engineer / software engineer, and the qualifications the companies looking for.

Comment on the talk, the presenter, the company, and their projects.

The presenter's work area is Research and Development department which is not my area-to-be in the sector, but I am sure it was interesting for those who are interested about that work of area. His company Cybersoft takes lots of interns in a year and it is a very good opportunity for us. Their projects are mostly on Research and Development which is also competitive like he mentioned throughout the talk.
